

School of Rock at The Rocks

New Zealand's Music Month is coming to The Rocks with a series of live performances on Saturday 1 May.

Long Story Short (winners of the 2009 Smoke-free Rockquest North Shore Heats,) Vent and Greenscreen will be playing from 3pm before a second set with local favourites Feigned Innocence at 8pm.

The gig is being organised by the School of Rock, with support from Fullers and the line-up is set to expand, with other artists to be confirmed.

The Rocks is located at 11 Belgium Street, Ostend.

Entrance is free although koha would be welcomed. There is a $5 charge for the evening concert with Feigned Innocence. •

Greenscreen will be bringing their high-energy, epic rock to The Rocks.

Silence is not always golden

For those who find themselves tongue-tied at the thought of speaking in public, help is at hand. Waiheke Island Toastmasters will be offering a Speechcraft course during May and June. "This is a great opportunity to hone speaking skills and gain confidence in front of an audience," says Toastmasters' president Jo Holmes.

Experienced toastmasters will offer guidelines for making good speeches, overcoming nerves, giving expert presentations and speaking off the cuff.

Participants will also be given constructive feedback and become familiar with how to run successful meetings. The course is not just about public speaking, says Jo. Rather it helps to develop communication skills invaluable for career development.

Course members will receive comprehensive course material and handouts, gain credits towards an internationally recognised qualification and get a six-month complimentary membership to the Waiheke Toastmasters Club.

"The club is very supportive and offers a friendly, fun environment should participants want to continue developing their skills after the course finishes," says Jo.

The course runs for eight weeks starting on Tuesday 11 May and participants must enrol by the end of April.
